Hartford, Conn. - Reid and Riege, P.C. is pleased to announce that Paul Palma has joined the firm in the Health & Human Services and Nonprofit Organizations Practice Groups.

Paul recently earned his Juris Doctor, magna cum laude, from Quinnipiac University School of Law, where he served as a Publication Editor of the Quinnipiac Health Law Journal and was a member of the Quinnipiac Health Law Society. During law school, he served as a legal intern for the Honorable Sarala V. Nagala of the U.S. District Court for the District of Connecticut and worked as a health law clerk at a law firm throughout his second and third years. Paul is anticipated to be admitted to the Connecticut bar this coming fall.

Prior to beginning his legal career, Paul gained hands-on health care experience as an emergency medical technician. That experience provided him with a valuable perspective on both the practical and legal aspects of health care. Paul aims to guide health care organizations through complex regulatory requirements so they can remain focused on providing top-tier care to their patients.

"We are pleased to welcome Paul to the firm," said Thomas Kasper, President of Reid and Riege, P.C. "His firsthand health care experience, strong academic background, and understanding of the regulatory issues facing providers make him a valuable addition to our Health & Human Services and Nonprofit Organizations Practices. Paul's practical perspective and commitment to client service align well with the thoughtful, solutions-oriented counsel our clients expect from Reid and Riege."
