In today's environment, which includes the empowerment of whistleblowers, regulatory issues can quickly evolve into a government investigation and eventually to administrative, civil, or criminal proceedings at both the state and federal level. Health & Human Services attorneys, working alongside the firm's litigators, are experienced in counseling individuals and entities facing active inquiries and helping them to resolve investigations, often before any proceeding or formal action is initiated. Our strategies are aimed at minimizing or completely avoiding penalties, negative publicity, and disruptions to core business operations.
