Overview

Charlotte brings a wealth of trial experience, strategic case development, and negotiation skills to every client matter. Her background has equipped her to handle complex, high-stakes litigation with confidence and care.

Prior to joining the firm, Charlotte served as an Assistant District Attorney in the New York County District Attorney's Office, where she built a record of courtroom excellence across a broad range of serious matters. She began her career in a general trial bureau, prosecuting felonies encompassing fraud, assault, and other violent and non-violent offenses. Charlotte later joined the Intimate Partner and Sexual Violence Bureau within the Special Victims Division, where she exclusively prosecuted domestic violence felonies and sexual assaults-matters demanding precision, sensitivity, and a deep command of evidence. Before her departure, Charlotte was elevated to a supervisory role in which she trained, mentored, and oversaw the caseloads of sixteen first-year Assistant District Attorneys.

That experience translates directly to the work Charlotte does for her clients at Reid and Riege. Whether she is protecting a client's intellectual or real property, litigating a complex business dispute, or defending a fiduciary, Charlotte applies the same discipline and advocacy she developed in some of New York's most challenging courtrooms.

- Tried five violent felony cases to jury verdicts and attained a conviction in all of them.
